

SGA Initiates Activity Cards For Student Membership

All full-time, undergraduate students will receive membership cards to the Student Government Association in order to participate in student activities.

These cards must be shown at SGA assemblies, culture series and at any special activity offering a student rate. The cards will be punched at the door.

"Each student who has paid her activity fee is entitled to a card," said Carol Ritchie, SGA president.

How Many Attend

Carol went on to explain that this is not a means of keeping attendance. It merely gives the SGA an idea of how many students attend different affairs. "This aids them in planning activities for the entire campus," she continued. The card, however, must be signed by each student and is not relative to the ID.

In an interview, Carol gave THE ANGELICUS a brief idea of the SGA activities for the year.

Bus Funds To Ease Rides

To enable more buses to be chartered by students for off-campus activities, the Student Government Association, in its first meeting Sept. 26, appropriated money for a bus fund.

Proposed by Social and Cultural Affairs Committee chairman Joan Lenihan, the bus fund will allot $25.00 from the S.G.A. to the student body.

According to Joan, many buses have been cancelled in the past when thirty or more girls did not sign up to ride the bus. With the fund, however, if thirty girls — ten short of the required forty — sign up for a bus, the S.G.A. will provide any additional money needed to pay for the bus.

A bus can transport fifty girls, while forty girls paying 75c each will pay for the bus. The extra $7.50 will be added to the bus fund for future use.

The S.G.A. anticipates that money will be replaced in the fund when fifty girls sign up for a bus.

In addition to the bus fund, the S.G.A. ratified three amendments: to give all committees three days prior to the S.G.A. meeting to present an issue for the agenda to the S.G.A. secretary; to add historian to the list of class officers with a point value of three; and to appoint the annual calendar of social and cultural affairs to the committee of the same name.

Many of the projects are still in the planning stage.

Student Affairs

The student affairs committee will handle the Women's Conference this year with the theme, "Women in Politics." Another program now in the planning stage, explained Carol, is a Christian-Jewish Dialogue with other colleges in the area.

Social-Cultural

The social-cultural committee will continue printing the quarterly calendar of events. It is presently planning the Coronation Ball honoring the Campus Queen and her court.

The committee is also coordinating a social handbook which will aid classes and clubs in organizing a school function. Another item in the air is a Barry-Biscayne weekend devoted to sun and fun.

Religious

The religious committee is working with the Sodality in planning the Living Rosary October 3. Soon the group will begin work on the retreat schedule for this year.

Campus tours, representatives at high school-college nights, tutoring service, and a telephone directory are among the activities of the service committee. The United Fund and the American Cancer Society at Hialeah will

Volunteers Eye Teaching Needs

Love-In, Inc., is a student-organized project to aid migrants and Negro children in the Miami area.

A team of Barry girls accompanied by teachers and Sisters from Barry will again teach Puerto Rican migrant men at the Naranja Migrant Camp in southwest Miami. The girls teach English as a second language and Spanish to the illiterates. This year the classes will be Monday and Wednesday nights from 6:00-9:30.

Another program beginning its second year is tutoring at Booker T. Washington, an all Negro junior high. Students volunteer two-hour breaks in schedule to assist one to three underprivileged students in any field of education.

Information about either project may be obtained from Mariana Delgado and Sylvia Iturralde.

Sodality Holds Annual Rosary

The annual Living Rosary will offer prayers for individual special intentions October 3 in Cor Jesu Chapel at 6:30 p.m.

Sponsored by the Sodality, the Living Rosary will differ from last year. Each girl will announce her special intention and offer the prayers of all the students in chapel for the intention.

Last year the girls prayed for soldiers chosen at random in Viet Nam.

Sodality Prefect Peggy Smith urges a strong response to the Living Rosary by all day and resident students.

Graduate Dean To Participate In Health Panel

Dr. Henry McGinnis, Dean of School of Social Work, will participate as a panelist at a program to promote the understanding by youth about the problems of birth defects.

"Project Concern," a youth conference sponsored by the Northeast Miami Junior Woman's Club and The National Foundation - March of Dimes will be held Saturday, October 7 from 9:30-12:00 at the Miami Dade Junior College north campus auditorium. All students are invited. Admission is free.

Health Panel

The panel conducted by Janet Barthle, State TAP's chairman for the March of Dimes will discuss "Health Careers." Besides Dr. McGinnis, Bernard Fogel, M.D., director of Birth Defects Center, University of Miami School of Medicine and Mrs. Edmund Greaux, instructor in the nursing department at Miami-Dade will be the panelists.

Assembly Series To Stress Inter-Group Relations

Rev. Ted Place, executive director of Greater Miami Youth For Christ will open the academic assembly series October 2 at 11:00 a.m. in the auditorium with a talk on "The Generation Gap-Gap."

Forum Series

The assembly series consists of a variety of forums discussing inter-group relations. The programs were co-ordinated by Sister Marie Siena in conjunction with Frank Magrath, Florida Regional director of National Conference of Christians and Jews, who will introduce the theme for this year's assembly program.

Rev. Place speaking on the problem of the '60's will give students an insight into the gap between the "under 30" and "over 30" generations.

Guiding Youth

With many years of experience in guiding youth, the reverend is presently organizing and directing the Youth For Christ ministry in Miami. He is the president of the Dade Juvenile Council, an instructor at Miami Bible College, a board member of Children's Service Bureau, a board member of Youth For Christ, International, and the director of a weekly TV program "Teen Scene" on Channel 10, Miami.

Inter-Group Relations

Other topics scheduled for future assemblies are inter-disciplinary approach to human relations, inter-faith movements, intermarital problems, and international relations.

Already scheduled for the second assembly is Lloyd Davis, assistant to Robert Weaver, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. His talk will be "The Ghetto Crisis in America."

Christy Singers Present Concert

The finger snapping, foot tapping, New Christy Minstrels will present their rendition of folk song in concert Saturday, October 14 at 8:15 p.m. in the auditorium.

Composed of seven boys and two girls, the group has streamlined their act into an international favorite of trained voices, skilled musicianship, comedy and bouncy beats. They perform "en masse" but each individual has his own specialty that he can perform as a solo.

The Minstrels were organized in 1961 and have patterned their own contemporary singing style after a company of Pre-Civil War entertainers created by Edwin "Pops" Christy.

The troupe follows the patterns of its predecessors by using a variety of instruments and breaking up group harmony numbers with solo and trio numbers.

Campus Queen Begins YRs

by Giustina Misuraca

Social and cultural activities are not the only interests of a campus queen. She sometimes sees the need for more important things, like politics. Joan Gunther, senior art major, is Barry's example of a wide-minded campus queen, who's interested in the Republican Party.

Joan

Joan feels that there is a definite need for a political organization on campus. "Political spirit on our campus doesn't exist and considering that many of us will be voting in the next presidential election, being informed is a necessity," she continued.

Plans for a Young Republican club on campus began last June when Joan wrote to the Republican National Committee for information concerning the organization of a club on campus.

Said Joan, "My letters were answered almost immediately with promises of assistance from Republican Party members in Florida.

The object of the YRs is to bring together that group of students who share in the Republican views. Among these views are the decentralization of power and the building up of the local units of government, curbing of inflation, rejection of class struggle, and balance of power among the branches of government.

And more specifically, the College Republican National Committee strives to serve the local, state and regional organizations and to work as a vital complement of the Republican Party in the field of education.

In addition to supporting the views of the Republican Party the YRs give young adults an opportunity to take an interest in politics and learn the issues involved.

The Barry College Young Republican organization is at its most critical stage, formation. A steering committee of six persons is presently involved in formulating a constitution and organization of the club. Among the many possibilities that they can plan for club projects are panels, films, field trips, community service, public forums and debates.

If the organization is successful in attaining at least ten members it can apply for membership in the Florida Federation of Young Republicans in November.

It is Joan's hope that the existence of a Young Republicans organization on campus might spark the interest of other students to organize a Young Democrats Club. She added, "If this did happen it would be interesting to hold debates between the two clubs."

Anyone interested in the Young Republicans can contact Joan Gunther concerning membership.

September 4th

To whom it may concern,

Presently I am a member of the armed forces, serving in Vietnam.

I am interested in corresponding with some of your students.

I realize that this is a most unusual request, but I can assure you, that my intentions are not irrational.

Is there anything you can do, to fulfill my request?

I'll be looking forward to your reply.

Thank you, for any inconvenience I might have caused you.

Herald Honors 'Trying Nun' Of Journalism

The Miami Herald honored Sister Bernard Michael, O.P., head of the journalism department, for her efforts in organizing a series of press conferences for high school journalism students.

"You've heard of 'The Flying Nun'," said Dick Yaeger, promotion director for The Herald, "Well, this is 'The Trying Nun.' And she tries harder than Avis."

The occasion was the first in the conference series organized to aid high school journalism students in their techniques of interviewing. The group gathered at Coral Gables High School auditorium, but other conference programs are scheduled at The Herald building.

J. Montgomery Curtis, vice-president for development of Knight Newspapers, Inc., addressed the group on his experiences in the newspaper business. Afterwards, a select panel of students from area high schools quizzed Curtis. Nancy Beth Jackson, Herald reporter and Larry Jinks, Herald managing editor, gave critiques on the interviewing techniques.

The conference program was developed in cooperation with Dade County Public Schools and journalism advisors to provide students with a chance to take active part in a live press conference interview atmosphere.

No Senior Privileges . . .

In a society so intent on social status and class distinction, it seems unusual that this college has lost its social consciousness. In many ways it is advantageous, but in others it is disappointing.

A student enters college anticipating the day when she will no longer be an underclassman, but a senior. By the time a girl reaches the "Big Girl On Campus" status, the restrictions and rules have changed so drastically that class position is no longer vital.

Presently, underclassmen have the same privileges as seniors. There is no distinction in having a senior smoker when everyone can smoke in their TV lounges. Now the smoker merely takes up space that could be an extra bedroom.

Seniors may have unlimited ones, but so do juniors.

Seniors can stay out until twelve, but now so can juniors. Seniors used to sit in the front rows, center section in the auditorium, and now everybody and his brother plops down.

After three years of studying, working and dreaming of the day of seniorhood, nothing. Seniors just aren't seniors anymore. Is there no distinction or prestige for the older group?

Assembly Education . . .

The campaign is on again to interest students in attending the required student assemblies. This year two types of assemblies are sponsored — one, a series headlining inter-group relations; and the second, SGA assemblies.

The series is co-ordinated by the college for the students' benefit. Education is more than reading from books and homework assignments. It is a cumulation and assimilation of knowledge from outside sources. It is out-of-book activity whether this includes attending lectures or watching TV. Group relations and social interaction broaden students' outlook; thereby, placing even a higher value on education.

On the other hand SGA assemblies concern a meeting of Student Government officers and elected members with the general membership to iron out problems, co-ordinate activities and generally acquaint the students with the workings of the new government.

Both types of assembly are planned with the educational interests of the students at heart. Both assemblies are required; the SGA requesting a student membership card for admittance. The education bandwagon is leaving for the broader, world beyond. Hop on!

Moments Abroad

by Wendy Goodridge

PART II

One advantage that European students certainly have is that the proximity of the different countries makes learning different languages easier. Most students speak three or four languages and study four or five. There is no necessity to "major" in a language as in America. Merely travelling across the borders and making friends can give a student fluency in a language.

Perhaps America being a "melting pot" is a disadvantage from the language standpoint, but isn't that how a country gets opportunities to broaden and progress — by different peoples getting together and sharing their ideas?

This is what makes our country . . . the joining of the various European cultures. And as Miles Laddie says, "America is Enthusiasm."

Another British student, Patrick Steele agrees, "American students are definitely different. They have more pep. They are always on the go!"

Patrick also feels that it is much better for a student to come on his own to study in Europe. He is more diligent and mature since he is more independent. "So many Americans just come to hitchhike all over Europe. But it is hard for the student to come here for only one semester since it does not give them time to adjust and get really involved in the studies."

Diane Barret, a 21 year old Barry student who studied in Neuchatel, Switzerland believes that the saying "Only in America" is very true about a lot of things in our country.

"In America men can change their occupation at the ages of 40 or 50 and still have chances for advancement. But in Europe, children usually choose what they want to be at the age of 10 and then prepare for that field."

Diane also feels that although American students "study for the moment" that our system is better. Nancy Siegle, a Barry senior who also studied in Neuchatel agrees by saying "Our whole country's level of education is higher because we educate so many more people who learn even a little, and a little awareness is better than none. We have great numbers of people knowing something rather than a few knowing a lot."

What Nancy noticed though was how lax the study of grammar is in the United States. "We need a better fundamental knowledge of English grammar — more courses should be given and made obligatory — even in college."

But as Diane suggests, "Would the average American student realize the advantages in this course or merely think it would be 'silly and a waste of time for something so childish?'"

Summer Journalists Put College Skills To Work

Karla McGinnis completes advertising copy for radio commercial.

In Radio Commercials

Flashing her "WDXY Is Everywhere" button, Karla McGinnis, a sophomore, recounted her experiences in another area of communications — radio.

As a continuity writer, Karla wrote copy for radio commercials at WDXY, a top-forty station in Sumter, South Carolina.

"Although I'm no expert in the field of advertising," Karla began, "I did learn some basic principles of advertising appeal, effectiveness, and selling gimmicks." To write a "spot" for a radio sponsor, Karla received basic information from the sales staff. From this she combined sound production, plus concise, convincing words to produce a commercial of ten, thirty or sixty second length.

"I learned the selling points of house trailers, automatic ice cube makers, movies, twelve-inch pizzas, car alignments, 23-cent-a-pound chicken, farm tractors and fashions," Karla related as she listed some of the station's advertisers.

Adapting the continuity to the sponsor is a large part of advertising, according to WDXY's part-time writer. Some advertisers prefer subtle, easy words, while others demand much musical or sound effect production and hard-sell techniques to sell their products.

"The greatest challenge of the summer was to be original, and to make my commercials concise, effective, and appealing to the ear."

Looking back, Karla remembers many beneficial assets of the summer. Having learned the components of effective radio advertising, she could apply them in the surroundings of a "dynamic radio station."

In Small Town Daily Newspapers

An old adage states that the best way to learn a business is "to get your feet wet" and Adrienne Moore did just that this summer when she interned at her local newspaper, The News Tribune, in Fort Pierce, Florida. "The job was rewarding in all ways and it made me realize that the newspaper business is for me," Adrienne said.

At first the job consisted of proofreading three days a week.

"This seemed rather nice, but it was only the beginning to a most gratifying summer experience," explained Adrienne. After two weeks the job was full-time while one of the proofreaders was on vacation. "Reporting to work at 7:00 every morning was no easy task," she said.

Fate came Adrienne's way when she succeeded to "Girl Friday" to the production superintendent. This job consisted of typing advertisements, bookkeeping and running errands. "The hours were much easier too," she said. "I reported in at 9:30 or 10:00 and left about 6:00 each night." However, proofreading twice a week was still on the schedule.

Then came the opportunity of a life-time! "Talk about 'How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying,'" exclaimed Adrienne, "This was fabulous!" The job as reporter was opened. The editor had decided to give Adrienne her first crack at writing. "I was petrified and I flubbed up the practice story."

"The situation in the news-room was just like you see in the movies," continued Adrienne. "I was the only college trained journalism personnel and the others watched me like a hawk."

Each morning Adrienne checked the police blotter for accidents, arrests, complaints, and any juicy news around town and then she picked up the hospital admissions, discharges and the baby list. "Two mornings I had to phone police officers at home for added information. Did you ever get an officer out of a sound sleep . . . ?" Adrienne exclaimed.

For feature stories, THE ANGELICUS editor received a variety of assignments, her first one being on aedes aegypti (that's a mosquito that carries yellow fever). This netted Adrienne the first of her six by-lines.

A visit to the school board and the fire board meetings as well as the low cost housing authority gave Adrienne a new insight into Fort Pierce politics. "I had never really taken an interest in my town, but these meetings opened my eyes to numerous things," she said. Adrienne also covered the military funeral of a hometown major who was killed in Vietnam leaving a wife and five children behind.

Most thrilling of assignments was to interview Lt. Gen. Lewis Walt, former head of the First Marine Division in Vietnam, and Mrs. Walt who were in Miami for a service reunion.

Another story, a little on the thrilling side, was to photograph a home out in the swamps that had burned. The fire department had no information as to the owners or their whereabouts when the empty structure was demolished. Through investigation, interviewing, and looking into public records, Adrienne was able to uncover the facts.

After a summer of constant movement, and of meeting new and unusual people, Adrienne finds it difficult not to keep busy. She hopes to keep this pace moving in her duties as editor of THE ANGELICUS.

Adrienne Moore types out a story before deadline.

Music Department Introduces Recorder Classes for Students

They call it "the pipe with a pedigree," and on the Barry campus students will soon learn to play the foot-long flute.

Classes in the recorder, a usually short wooden pipe with seven holes for fingers and one for the thumb, will begin October 10 under Mr. Arnold Grayson. Having assisted with the Madrigal Singers in their Renaissance moods, Mr. Grayson will teach the ten-week course for no credit, open to Barry students and the Miami community.

Mr. Grayson is a well-known recorder expert and is the director of the Recorder Workshop of Coconut Grove.

Derived from the archaic verb record, "to sing like a bird," the recorder dates from the twelfth century and reached its height in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries with Bach, Purcell, Vivaldi and Handel. Since its recent return in popularity, the recorder has gathered over 750,000 players.

The recorder's popularity is accredited to its light sound and playing ease. Hamlet remarked that playing the recorder "is as easy as lying." The inexpensive instrument is used in many elementary schools for teaching music.

According to Sister Alma Christa, O.P., the fun of the recorder is "getting together and playing it." Sister explained that the recorder's popularity is so universal that at a recent Recorder Society meeting, Sister met an elementary school president, a bank president, a young couple, and a college student. The group plays a variety of pieces from the baroque style to modern compositions written for the recorder.

Students wishing to take the recorder course should contact Sister Alma Christa. The first class will be October 10 at 7:30 p.m. in Room 137.

Dates Set For NTE Tests

PRINCETON, N. J. — College seniors preparing to teach school may take the National Teachers Examinations on three new dates this year.

In nearly 500 locations in the United States, the tests will be given on February 3, April 6, and July 6, 1968.

Results of the National Teacher Examinations are used by many large school districts as one of several factors in the selection of new teachers and by several states for certification or licensing of teachers.

NFCCS Opens Membership To All Schools

NEW YORK — The National Federation of Catholic College Students has now opened its membership to any school, denominational or not.

Formerly the organization's membership concentrated on small Catholic women's colleges. Now, however, faculty members, college and university administrators also will be permitted to join.

Shifting its emphasis, the NFCCS will attempt to evaluate the problems facing religious-affiliated institutions.

Barry is not the only one awaiting a new library. Florida Southern College, Lakeland, is looking forward to the opening of the E. T. Roux Library in late February.

They almost didn't make it, though. The architectural drawings had to be revised to move the building three feet south and ten feet west. Why? A giant oak tree would have been standing in the middle of the library, and no-one had the heart to cut it down!
