

President Explains Future Tuition Increases

by Joan Lenihan

Barry students are soon to feel the sting of the rising cost of education.

Sister Dorothy recently announced a tuition increase over the next two years which will bring the cost to $1200 a year by 1969.

The tuition, however, amounts to less than 60 per cent of the operational costs of the college, Sister said in a recent interview with THE ANGELICUS. The balance is made up of the contributed salaries of the sisters and the grants and gifts to the college.

The tuition increase will be used to defray the operational expenses, including salaries for lay teachers and administrative personnel, maintenance of the school and new equipment.

Sr. M. Dorothy

Sister was hopeful that more financial aid would be available to the students. She noted that Barry now receives the maximum possible amount of financial aid from the federal government and other sources. The college now administers $430,894 in student financial aid in loans, scholarships, grants and student employment.

Barry is now engaged in a ten year development program which began in 1965. The Monsignor William Barry Memorial Library is the first building project in the program. A science wing built on the site of the present library and a twin dormitory doubling the present sleeping capacity are included in future plans.

Future of Private Colleges

The future of private colleges in this country is controversial. Without substantial government funds, many schools are facing bankruptcy. Schools across the country have been faced with the necessity of raising tuition and increasing fund raising drives. Already some private institutions have been absorbed into state colleges. The ratio of state college students to private college students is two to one, and will be three to one by 1975, according to Newsweek.

Sister Dorothy is optimistic about the role of the private college. She mentioned values adherent to small colleges which are not available in larger state institutions. Sister stressed the need for private colleges to unite and share facilities as Barry and Biscayne are presently doing. She mentioned the Independent Colleges and Universities of Florida, a group presently working on a scholarship program to keep talented Florida students in the state and to encourage them to attend private institutions.

Comparing Barry with other schools its size, Sister stated that Barry's tuition is considerably lower than other institutions.

Christmas

Director Reveals Production For February Performance

The Lark by Jean Anouilh will be the second production of the drama department this year. The story of Joan of Arc — the play will be directed by Miss Patricia Minnaugh.

Asked why she chose The Lark, Miss Minnaugh commented "I think it has an idea which becomes more confirmed by passing time," the idea "that with courage and faith in God, everything is possible against any odds."

Challenges of Joan

Joan faces numerous challenges, including disownment by her family, and the frustrations of gaining favor from the French nobility to fight the English.

Since there are many plays about Joan of Arc, Miss Minnaugh chose the best in her estimation — the play by Anouilh.

Anouilh is not only interested in the historical aspect of Joan but, most significantly, in the emotions of the maid of France.

Miss Minnaugh believes that "Saint Joan" presented on television on December 5, did not really express the sincerity of the life of Joan.

"Saints are flesh and blood people. Joan is such a real, vital, alive, and sensitive person," Miss Minnaugh said.

Miss Minnaugh further commented that the audience will learn from The Lark that "goodness and ability to follow God's will is not above us."

Tryouts for The Lark are January 8 and 9 at 7:00 p.m. There are 15 male roles and five female roles.

In the elections which took two days to complete, the freshmen also selected the girls who will represent them in S.G.A.

The seven representatives include: Diane Drake, Patricia DuBeck, Joan Bonner, Joyce Gibbons, Cathleen Gillen, Patricia Lenahan, and Margaret Rouse.

The newly elected officers have begun plans for the counselor's party scheduled early in second semester. Having chosen their class song already, the freshmen are selecting their class shield, patron saint, colors, motto and preparing for their first class day.

GOP Senator Praises YRs

Senator Everett Dirksen disclosed at the Republican Governors Convention held in West Palm Beach last weekend that the Barry College Young Republican Club is the only all-girl group in the Federation of Young Republicans. Katherine Nin reports that in addition to the Senator's short reference to the Barry YRs, the club also received a standing ovation.

Biscayne, Barry Discuss Draft, GOP

by Wendy Goodridge

To stimulate interest in political ideas, Biscayne College organized and began a Political and International Relations Club this fall.

President John Dooner believes "students should evaluate themselves and think for themselves rather than have someone else think for them. This is an important election year and we should become responsible for the influential events that will help us, as voters, to select the right man."

John feels that girls can and should play an important role in their club because "they do think differently and they also have opinions to give."

Barry Student as Secretary

Liz Morris, President of the Junior Class at Barry, is secretary for the newly-formed organization and encourages Barry girls to join. "For the college girl to be intellectually well-rounded, it is necessary that she not overlook the field of politics. This club could present the opportunity for students to begin to develop an interest in government."

Members of the Biscayne Political Club meet in Dalton-Dunspaugh lobby to plan a future meeting. John Richiski and Liz Morris, secretary, listen as John Dooner comments on a future topic for debate.

One objective of the club is to stage a mock Republican Convention next semester. Regular convention procedures will be followed but to keep it on a practical scale, the states represented will probably be limited to the home states of the club members.

Earlier this year students debated the present Draft Law system. Girls were surprised to hear such remarks as "The Draft is like a sledge hammer over us. Idealistically it's nice to say we shouldn't have to force people to join the service and kill, but we are dealing with reality," said Mike Madden.

Col. T. Donahue Posts Reminders Of Dec. Deadlines

December deadlines for completing student employee work sheets were announced by Col. T. R. Donahue, financial aid director.

For the pay period December 16 through December 31, time sheets must be turned in before 4:00 p.m., December 29. Students should submit an estimate for work performed on December 29 through December 31.

Checks for the pay period November 23 through December 15 will be issued on December 20.

Col. Donahue reminds students on student aid to use a blue sheet; students on work-study to use a yellow sheet.

Lilliput Revisited . . .

This is the season to be jolly, as commercialism puts it, but from the tone around campus lately, it is also a pretty frightening season.

Almost three years ago, editor Jan Copuzelo, in a long editorial entitled "Commentary from Lilliput," was fearless enough to bring many disturbing things out into the open and the succeeding issue increased its number of pages to carry all the campus reactions to her comments.

It's time for Lilliput again.

There exists a monopoly of power here that emanates from the office of the dean of students. By virtue of her office, the dean is responsible for all student activities and services, requests, permissions, and for moderating the entire operation of the Student Government Association. With few exceptions, and as far as the students are concerned, she runs the campus.

The big question is: Why should one administrator have to run the whole campus? Students stand in corners and mumble about the "dictatorship" that is being enforced, but no one yet has found the courage to investigate the problem publicly and come up with some recommendations.

Now is the time for all good students to face the issue. Right now, fear is what is keeping our leaders from saying what they think, and there seems to be good reason why.

The dean of students is the proper authority in all cases — in every case, but there is no other recourse for student petition for the time being that does not eventually find itself right back on the desk of the dean.

The bone of serious contention lays in the fact that often times the person causing a stir is the person who has to hear the complaints. This is most awkward for both parties.

Alpha Omega had a recent incident. A new, vivacious club, well organized, properly approved by SGA and one which sponsored the best and highly successful shindig on campus this year. With $200 in their kitty, they were approached recently by the dean with the suggestion to disband because, they were told, what they want to do for Barry is already being accomplished by other clubs and organizations.

The club officers are well aware of the fact that they are legally established on this campus and that legally established they will remain. Yet the one with all the power to rule is the one asking them to disband.

SGA is bogged down by their own constitution. One clause states: "A moderator will be appointed by the administration." No powers or duties are stipulated, but the power of final approval is still there in the workings.

We are told that the dean has the job because "everything has to go through her office, anyway."

And, indeed, everything does. Where to sleep, when to eat, how to plan a party, when to plan a party, when and where we go off campus, what we can wear, and whether or not we can go home for the holidays.

We do not object to those necessary "evils" of dorm and campus regulations. There is good reason for their enforcement and it is supposed that it's the dean who gets stuck with the dirty job of enforcing the rules.

What we do object to is the autonomous nature of the whole deal. Is there no other person in this college who would be interested in working with students? Is the dean the only interested person here? It seems to us that this administrator has just too much to do, and above all, too much to say about everything.

Therefore, we suggest that SGA request a new moderator, one who does not have a conflict of interests. SGA and other resident students say that they won't face up to their present predicament of dealing with a moderator/dean/dorm supervisor simply because they have to face the same person for all other matters. It is obvious, therefore, that our student government is and will be totally ineffective until such time when they are relieved of this monopoly of power over them.

Secondly, moderators of class divisions and clubs and other organizations should enjoy the "final approval" power to grant permissions for their group activities without having to submit plans to the dean for approval. SGA has carefully allowed for a system whereby coordination of all events and activities is worked out by SGA. Yet, requests of all kinds end up in the dean's office.

Thirdly, we suggest that class moderators or dorm moderators handle late, overnight and special permissions that resident students require. These people are more readily available to students and the method would alleviate some of the detailed work that goes on in the dean's office.

Let our stand be clearly understood. We do not endorse any movement that seeks to eliminate authority. What we are asking here is that authority be distributed among the faculty members so that students will deal more honestly with it and that there is no monopoly of power invested in one person.

Lilliput is out on a limb again, but it's time that some action be taken with these knotty problems.

We love Barry enough to go out on the limb in an attempt to resolve what seems to be an unsurmountable problem. We also expect to find the harsh complainers out on that limb with us.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

It appears that Coach Stibler made a mistake by having his Bobcats oppose the University of Tampa Spartans on a Monday night when Barry girls have an early curfew. Granted the Bobcats had played two games the past weekend but the athletic calibre of the opponents made the Monday evening clash far more important. Support from a large, enthusiastic crowd was in order since the Bobcats were facing such a formidable opponent. The only trouble was that the interested Barry girls also encountered a formidable opponent.

Unfortunately, only a handful of Barryites could arrange to help cheer on "our only brother school" because late permissions were not granted. A large number of students did ask and were denied permission. The reason offered was "no." To encounter such an intangible response was far more than discouraging. One's attitude turned to disgust when even the attempts of Biscayne's Pep Club failed to get any further.

To have granted a 10:30 permission on a Monday night would have sufficed. For the extension of such a brief amount of time it seems absurd that such a nonsensical attitude could have been taken. Is going to a basketball game too much responsibility for the college woman to assume?

Around Barry, it appears so.

Principles Go Into Practice

Five Triumph At Housekeeping

by Giusina Misuraca

It lasted six weeks, entailed living in and running a seven room house and brought plenty of fun, occasional tears and 33 pounds of unneeded weight.

The Home Management House, located on N.E. 14th Street, was a two credit hour course for five senior home economics majors, Mary Ann Coury, Nancy Fraser, Dorothy Law, Giustina Misuraca and Mary Catherine Ungar. The purpose of living in the house, called Home Management Lab, was to put into practical use the principles and methods learned in the prerequisite Home Management Lecture. A grade based on the individual's application of principles and accomplishment of responsibilities was given after completion of the course.

Sr. Eulalia, Chairman of the Home Economics department, supervised the course and was the silent observer. Sister often joined the girls for meals and sometimes made surprise visits.

House Duties

In the six week required period, the girls rotated the specific responsibilities of hostess, first, second and third cook and housekeeper. The cooks and the hostess planned the menus, did the food shopping, prepared and served the meals, and kept the kitchen in order. The housekeeper kept the general order of the house, dusted, ironed linens and vacuumed the wall to wall carpeting in each room.

Problems were always brewing in the kitchen, the worst being the Pyrex pots, the girls kept breaking them. Laughed Dorothy Law, "One day it was peas under glass, another time it was lemon pudding dripping through the stove, and even scorched tea bags in a cracked pot." It was later decided that the heat of the electric burner often got too intense for the Pyrex.

Comforts of 'Home'

The practice house kept the home ec. majors busy, but they admit enjoying the conveniences of a dishwasher, garbage disposer, air conditioning and an automatic ice maker that didn't know when to stop.

Said Mary Ann Coury, "The ice maker startled us the first few nights because it sounded like someone breaking glass. But we moved from fear to fascination trying to catch it in motion."

Shopping was a challenge, for the five were on a 35-dollar budget the first four weeks. Nancy Fraser pointed out that a great deal of their grade depended on their ability to prepare balanced meals and entertain within the limits of their budget. "That was home management," said Nancy. The budget increased to 45 dollars the final two weeks and the girls splurged on steaks.

House Warming Gifts

"Of course," said Mary Catherine Ungar, "Our dorm felt sorry for us the first week and kept sending over food as housewarming gifts. They were sure we would starve."

But starve they did not, for the group as a whole gained 33 pounds. They even boast of not having the same dinner twice in the six weeks they lived in the practice house.

And then there were tears. Five very different people trying to run a house and attend classes at the same time sometimes caused a few problems. But now that the five have moved out of the practice house, they all agree that the tears were forgotten, but the experience they gained and the fun they had will last a life time.

Candlelight and delicious food scored another success for these senior home ec majors. Enjoying dinner are Nancy Fraser, Sister M. Eulalia, Mary Catherine Ungar, Mary Ann Coury, Giustina Misuraca, and Dorothy Law.

Tryouts, French Convention Highlight Holiday Events

With but a few days before Christmas holidays, the campus is still vibrant with activity.

Among the plans are try-outs for The Young and Fair, a drama written by N. Richard Nansh, concerning innocence, jealousy, and guilt in the lives of the students of Brook Valley Academy.

The play will be the first student production of the year with Jeanne Zynda, junior drama major, as director. Tryouts are Monday, December 18 from 2-3:00 p.m. and 6-9:00 p.m., and Tuesday, December 19 from 3-5:30 p.m. in the auditorium.

Jeanne urges all to try out, since there are 21 women parts.

French Convention

Students from the education department will attend the convention of the American Association of Teachers of French at the Everglades Hotel December 26-30. The students are interested in information on current teaching problems and exhibits of the newest materials and teaching aids.

As president of the Florida chapter of the Association, Mr. Carroll Naves of the French department is in charge of the annual convention.

Christmas Tea

SGA is sponsoring a Christmas tea for the faculty on Tuesday, December 19 from 3-5:00 in the faculty lounge.

First on the Culture Series for the new year will be the Ballet Concerto, January 14 at 8:15 p.m. in the auditorium.

Youth Hall

Groups from Barry will brighten the Christmas spirit at Youth Hall. As a jumbo Christmas present, topped with a party, groups have reupholstered two sofas for the Hall, decorated the Hall with Christmas ornaments, wrapped gifts, and collected books and gift packets for the boys and girls.

SGA Revises Dress Code For On-Off Campus Wear

SGA members unanimously approved a relaxation of dress regulations to become effective in January.

At the Dec. 12 SGA meeting, the casual attire committee presented its recommendations for revisions of the casual dress code. The proposals now are pending sanction from the dean of student's council.

The revisions, if passed, will give more freedom to the students in choosing their attire for off-campus activities and for dorm wear.

Students will be allowed to wear slacks or shorts in the lobbies of the dormitories, as well as for downtown shopping trips.

Proper attire for the pool will consist of modest suits and caps. Sandals or other footwear, a beach coat, shift, or shirt must be worn going to and coming from the pool.

According to Agnes Kettyles, chairman of the ad hoc committee, personal discretion shall determine the proper attire for off-campus activities. "Certain aspects of dress, she said, "are not allowed on campus. Slacks and shorts are never worn in Thompson Hall or on the academic side of campus.

"A raincoat must be worn over slacks or shorts when crossing the academic side of campus. Mini-skirts or other extremely short skirts, sweatshirts, football jerseys, etc., are not acceptable as campus attire, and sandals and shoes worn on campus must have a heel strap."

The academic side of campus includes the grass area of the mall, Adrian Hall, and all offices in the academic building, the areas of Thompson Hall, Cor Jesu Chapel, and the Monsignor William Barry Library.

If the new dress regulations are passed, students are urged to use the same discretion and prudence in the limits of good taste in deciding their attire both on and off campus.

8% Increase In Mail Expected

Miami Post Office officials expect to handle an eight per cent increase of holiday mail over last year's figure of 124, 300,300 pieces. They therefore urge prompt mailing and careful use of Zip Code.

Package senders are warned that deadlines for Parcel Post have passed and special delivery postage may be necessary for assured arrival before Christmas.

Spanish Professor Instructs Peruvian Doctors in English

by Pam Marotta

Once again, Barryites are seeing Sister Kenneth busy at work or waving a hello as they pass by the Spanish Department office. Sister has recently returned after three months from Lima, Peru, where she instructed one-hundred fifty-two university medical students in English. The classes were held at the modern, twelve hundred bed Hospital Central de Empleados.

"A man without a country" is a well-known phrase — but Sister Kenneth is a woman with two countries. It is obvious that South America is close to her heart.

There was no trace of displeasure as Sister stated that she had no sooner finished summer instructions at the University of Miami when she was off for Peru on September 11 of this year.

Perseverance of Students

Sr. Kenneth was much impressed by the perseverance of the medical students despite their heavy study load. The courses in English were requested by the students themselves in addition to their other courses.

"It's a great edification for any teacher. They learned beautifully and rarely missed class," Sister explained, noting that medical English was necessary in order for the student to read medical journals and further studies in the United States. The hospital offers approximately nine scholarships annually to the U.S.

It was obvious that Sister enjoyed her work, the students and the country immensely. She proudly displayed pictures of her students and a beautiful, silver, engraved tray which the students presented to her in appreciation for her work.

Sister Kenneth continued to emphasize the enthusiasm, anxiety and ability of the students. "They have such dignity and a thirst for knowledge."

Universal Youth

Sister has had many occasions to observe college students. "Youth is the same," she commented. There are many similarities in American and Latin students. They enjoy popular music and many of the same fashion trends. She also found that the older generation has some of the same disdain for mini skirts and go-go girls.

In contrast to the similarities, Sister noted that the young people of South America are more conscious of political and social problems. "The young people want to clear everything up in a hurry," observed Sister.

Sister resided at the Dominican convent in Callao which was located twenty-five miles from the hospital in Lima. Sister described the people she met as ever-eager to discuss the United States, politics and racial problems.

Impatience for Change

"There is an impatience on the part of the natives to move ahead fast. They're tired of waiting," commented Sister. Mass communication seems to intensify their condition coupled by a mixture of dire poverty and extreme wealth. The people are also proud of their Inca tradition and are hesitant to divorce themselves mentally to meet the present conditions. The average man on the street wants to be helped by technicians so that he can in turn, help others.

Although her stay in Lima involved considerable time and effort on her part, Sister Kenneth's comments reflected only dedication and pleasure. Her presence will be obviously missed in Lima but her return was much anticipated at Barry.

Interdisciplinary Course To Be Held In French

The philosophy department has announced plans for a new interdisciplinary course, Philosophy 458, Recent French Philosophers. The course, which begins January 30, will be a study of philosophy conducted exclusively in the French language.

The course is aimed at discovering the views of certain philosophers who think in French and who cast their thoughts in that idiom. Philosophy 458 attempts to satisfy the need for a terminal course in a foreign language as a means to other attainment and not as an end in itself.

According to Mr. William dePalme, instructor, "For students conversant in French, this course should be useful in providing philosophical insights and acquaintance with contemporary French thinkers. On the other hand, for students already skilled in the study of philosophy, this course would help to close the gap between the study of French and the application of French as an intellectual instrument.

The course will concern itself with the study of thoughts to be found in the writings of some contemporary existentialists such as Jean Paul Sartre.

present speakers who will help enlighten the members on world events. Prof. Dennis Connally from Florida Atlantic University addressed the group in November on "Morality to the Individual". "We are lucky to be located in Miami," John says, "because we can have the opportunity to hear speakers from all over the country who may visit the city."

Mr. Gladu, teacher of Political Science at Biscayne, is the club moderator and helps coordinate the functions with the officers, Mike Gillin, Vice-President and John Richiski, Treasurer. Mr. Gladu is concerned and interested that the club develop and mature because he feels students should become intelligently aware of the political world.
