ADMINISTRATION and FACULTY

For God loveth none but him that dwelleth with wisdom.

For she is more beautiful than the sun, and above all the order of the stars; being compared with the light, she is found before it.

For after this cometh night, but no evil can overcome wisdom.

For it is she that teacheth the knowledge of God, and is the chooser of his works.

Out of classes . . . then what? · If an unnatural hush descends over the school for about twenty minutes you'll know that the Angelicus has just come off the press and everyone's finding out the latest news. First stop every afternoon is the Campus Store . . . Other times Calaroga Hall becomes the scene of an informal style show or of a formal breakfast or luncheon.

Making a greater contribution each year to the spiritual enrichment of the Barry student body is the Cor Jesu choir. During the school year the choir chanted the Proper of the Mass each Sunday. Other activities included the singing of the Pan-American Day Mass, the presentation of the Christmas Oratorio, the Oratorio of the Passion, a radio appearance, and contributions to other campus programs.

. . . That is welcome news to the aviator for it means clear vision ahead . . . and time was when it applied to graduation days in a world in which one could plan for the future. • But today, the outlook is clouded. The world is groping its way as it seeks to find the path to peace and security. Mistakes of the past have brought the terrible tragedy of war today. • Men are fighting and dying the world over to preserve for you that which is worth saving in the old world in the hope that as you take your place by their side or in the vast army of workers behind the lines, you will somehow avoid the pitfalls of international distrust, of hate and greed which cause wars. It is their hope that you will fight through to build a new world of peace, of opportunity, of security • The burden is heavy, the responsibility great but there is no one else on whom it can fall, no one else who can clear the shadows from the world and bring again an era of "CEILING UNLIMITED."
