U.S. Congressman's daughter starts fresh at Barry

by Jim Varsallone

Christine Mica...just your basic Barry University freshman with your basic first year questions.

Right?
Wrong.
Mica, 18, is far from basic and has a lot of answers.

At Barry, she is Christine. But outside of the Miami Shores based college, she is known as U.S. Congressman Dan Mica's daughter.

"Sometimes it's frustrating, when I'm trying to accomplish something on my own and people say that," she said. "But I'm proud of my father, and I would never deny the fact that I was his daughter."

Christine is making a name for herself at Barry as a student government association senator. At St. Mary's Academy (high school) in Alexandria, Virginia, she was the student council's vice president in her junior and senior years.

"I'm the oldest of four children and am always taking leadership roles at home and in school," said Mica, who recently celebrated her 18th birthday. "I love helping other people and working in SGA is a way of doing that."

At the elementary school level, Mica attended St. Julie-ann's and St. Ann's, two catholic schools in West Palm Beach, FL. She has always been enrolled in a catholic institution of some sort, and that played a role in her decision to attend Barry.

"Barry was my first choice," Mica said. "It's a catholic university. It's a small school, and it's in a big city. The minute I saw Barry I knew that I would be going there."

"Barry felt like home," she added.

Her aunt, Susan Fry Lochrie of Fort Lauderdale, is a 1960 Barry graduate. Lochrie was the SGA president, when Barry was an all girls' school. She is currently involved with the alumni committee and toured the campus last year with her niece.

The Mica family lives in Virginia, but they also have a Christmas and summer home in Lake Worth, Florida. Academically, Mica does very well.

"Usually with academics, I do well," Mica said. "At Barry I may lean toward a degree in education or in history."

Mica now makes her home in first floor Dunsbaugh.

As for how she feels about her friends, room, and Barry, "I love it," she says.

Mica Visits Mica And Friends At Barry...U.S. Congressman Dan Mica recently came to Barry and took his daughter Christine and several of her friends out on the town. They met Miami Vice's Don Johnson. ### Student Government Association

In a news conference on Oct. 16, 1987 the Commissioner of Education for the State of Florida, Betty Castor, spoke about AIDS in the classroom. She stated clearly that children who are carriers of the virus will be allowed and are entitled to equal education as provided by the law.
The Educators Association discussed equal education for all. Children who do carry the virus will be tested and, if found that they are not capable of spreading the disease, will be permitted to attend any school of their choice.
If the local school boards do not follow this new ruling they will be subject to lawsuit and the courts will enforce the rule if necessary.
The Florida Department of Education has established a policy it would like to be implemented statewide. It is not mandatory, however.
This policy suggests that students be taught about how to handle different situations that might arise concerning the AIDS virus.
This will describe in detail the AIDS virus and make children, especially teenagers, more aware of the disease. This course would only be offered to Junior and Senior students.

SOUTH AFRICA, Each candidate supports vigorous sanctions against South Africa and strengthening bordering states against South Africa. Gov. Babbitt proposed extending recognition to the Black National Congress, while Rep. Gephardt said he might give arms to South African blacks if necessary.

Debate: Democrats for President

by Kenneth Morton

Recently the six Democratic Presidential Candidates debated national security at Miami's James L. Knight Center. Gov. Bruce Babbitt Ar., Gov. Michael Dukakis Mass., Rep. Richard Gephardt Mo., Sen. Albert Gore Tn., Rev. Jesse Jackson, Sen. Paul Simon Ill. attended.

CENTRAL AMERICA, Each of the six democrats support the Arias peace plan. All, except Sen. Gore, oppose contra aid. Every candidate would urge the Central American democracies to economically and politically isolate Nicaragua if it renegs on the peace plan.

Gov. Dukakis called contra aid "a violation of international and U.S. laws" but Sen. Gore warned "We cannot assume the Sandanistas are going to live up to every promise they made" referring to the Arias plan.

SOVIETS, The candidates would each propose continued arms reductions with the soviets. Rev. Jackson proposed a 1/3 nuclear arms reduction while Gov. Dukakis said soviet human rights should be tied to any arms treaty.

Gov. Babbitt would reaffirm U.S. commitment to the conventional defense of western Europe. Sen. Simon proposed a nuclear test ban treaty and Sen. Gore made a stand for "peace through strength" in soviet relations.

TERRORISM, All the candidates support covert activities to combat terrorism within the guidelines of international and U.S. laws. CIA assassinations and government overthrows were unanimously denounced.

Sen. Simon and Rep. Gephardt proposed isolating terrorist nations, i.e. Libya, Iran, Syria, if necessary. Sen. Simon, Gov. Dukakis and Sen. Gore would use U.S. military forces to combat terrorism. Gov. Dukakis said we have "a full range of options and choices" open to us when fighting terrorism but when Rev. Jackson joined Dukakis in denouncing the U.S. invasion of Grenada, Sen. Gore attacked, saying they were "just plain wrong."

PERSIAN GULF, All six candidates support a ban on arms sales to Iran and Iraq, invoking the war powers act in the Persian Gulf, and establishing a multi-lateral force in the gulf to share military and economic responsibilities with Japan and Western Europe.

Sen. Gore said it was "in our self interest to keep the sea lanes open" but Rep. Gephardt thought U.S. flags should go off the tankers.

Judicial Activism

The Supreme Court's job, or one of its jobs, is to define how much personal freedom we as citizens are granted under the constitution. It is not the court's job to rubber stamp the popular opinions of the day by declaring them part of the constitution.

In other words the court should define what freedoms come out of the constitution and not read popular opinion into the constitution.

I believe a majority of Americans want broad personal freedom. I want broad personal freedoms, but the way to secure these freedoms is through the legislative and amendment processes as provided by the constitution. Following these guidelines would assure that our freedoms are defined by "we the people" not by individual judges.

A big hand for the Big Town

By Pamela Slutzky

Ronnie Self composed the song "The Big Town" about the grand allure of the big city. "The Big Town," the movie, captures the heyday of one of the best of the big cities: Chicago, 1957.

In the late 1950's Chicago was the breeding ground for some of the most exclusive underworld, entertainment and underworld-entertainment. "The Big Town" unfolds this racy side of Chicago in all its amoral character: craps, strippers, fan dances, adultery, sex, manipulation, revenge, violence and deceptions.

The refined Matt Dillon lands in the middle of this corrupted setting as J.C. Cullen, a not-so-innocent farmboy from Indiana hoping to win his fortune as a professional craps player. Cullen, who is fast with the odds, is lured to the risky action of the Gem Club: a high class burlesque establishment complete with feathered strippers and smoky rooms for illegal gambling.

In the club Cullen meets and falls for Lorry Dane (Diane Lane), the star stripper and wife of its shady owner, George Cole (Tommy Lee Jones). It is Lorry who entraps the big-hearted Cullen in a net of seduction and manipulation.

The two lovers meet secretly—in some of the most beautiful scenes of Chicago nightlife—and have a relationship that verges on nasty; they cannot wait to leave the bar. On stage, Lorry Dane strips for Cullen but it is not as erotic as Diane Lane thinks it is.

Suzu Amis plays J.C.'s other love interest, Aggie Donaldson. Amis gives a fresh performance that boosts the film and the audience. Donaldson makes Lorry Dane appear sleazy by comparison—which isn't too hard to do.

The real substance of the film however, centers on Cullen's game of craps. Good action and acting heightens the excitement, especially the hostility between George Cole and Cullen.

The craps scenes bring "The Color of Money" to mind but the camera centers more on the characters than on the angles of shots. There is also more camaraderie between the motley folk playing craps than there was in "Color".

The stakes are often high but Cullen cares less for the money than for the game particularly when the stakes are high. His relationship with Lorry Dane, made extreme by her manipulation, fuels the dangerous gamble he takes with the dice. Known as the "best arm anyone has seen," J.C. has luck riding with him.

Matt Dillon looks great in the 50's and adds to the nostalgia of Chicago with his cool bearing. The lights, sights and hip-rocking music ("Shake Rattle and Roll") show the viewer the Chicago of the rock-n-roll era.

The plot is both bluesy and mood-lifting though it is enlivened by 3 or 4 neatly judged subplots with Bruce Dern, Lee Grant, Tom Skerrit and David Grant. This "The Big Town" should go well with anyone that enjoys the mood of the 50's, notably the fast lane action of the Chicago nightlife.

Matt Dillon stars as J.C. "Cully" Cullen, a young man who finds love and a lot more with the sensuous Lorry Dane, portrayed by Diane Lane, after going to Chicago hoping to win fame and fortune in back-room gambling arenas in Columbia Pictures' "The Big Town."
