The Barry Buccaneer

A Letter From the President

Dear Students,

You have begun your new academic year and no doubt life on campus has pretty much become routine. I'm sure you find yourself doing many things without much thought and perhaps this is a good time to remind ourselves of why we do what we do.

We get up, we eat, we go to class, we recreate—but the greatest thing we do is to be with one another. How are we with one another? Not routinely I hope.

I hope that we are together thoughtfully, in kindness and an awareness that we are a community. We are a community that learns, studies and lives together.

How do we live, study and learn together? My hope is that we do this by being a place where freedom of expression and civility are affirmed, where we are just to one another—recognizing the sacredness of one another. I hope we are a community where we each accept our responsibilities to the group, so our behavior is for the common good. I trust we are caring to one another, we are supported and encouraged to assist one another, and finally I hope that our routine makes time for us to celebrate who we are.

Remember, as a member of Barry's community your benefit will be equal to how you choose to participate.

Routine is good since it helps us achieve our goals, but unless we take time to appreciate who we are, educational goals will be lacking—for upon graduation we still will not know how to be together in this world that needs our presence so desperately.

So, enjoy the semester and learn great things, but still be part of the great people around you, for you are special to this community.

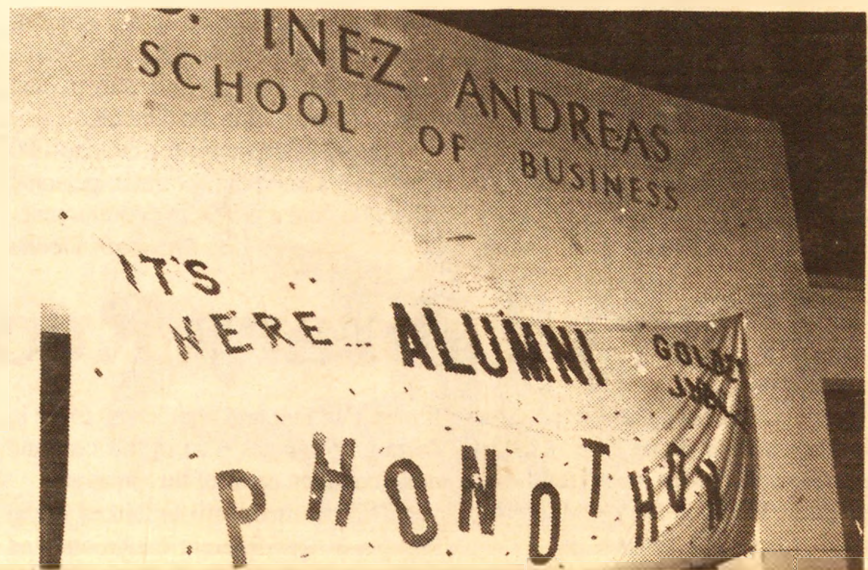

Thank you and God bless you.
Gratefully,

Sister Jeanne O'Laughlin, OP
President

Phonothon Brings in Donations

Exceeding its goal once again, this year's Alumni Phonothon raised $109,029.

The main ingredient for this year's enormous success was the participation from the student body. The students, in addition to other volunteers, helped to raise money with their hard work.

The event, which was coordinated by the alumni department, raised $40,000 during the first few hours of the first night. This incredible amount helped to set the pace and motivate the volunteers for the successive nights. Surprisingly, the number of volunteers reached at least 120 on each of the three nights.

The volunteers came from a variety of organizations and departments on campus. Among those present were the Circle K Club, Phi Kappa Tau, and Delta Phi Epsilon. Miami Country Day School also helped by sending over some members of their Anchor Club. The Barry Cheerleaders boosted spirits by making phone calls, posting up tallies, and serving drinks. More importantly, however, their bright faces and upbeat cheers prompted the callers to continue trying to make the Phonothon the great success that it was.

Donna Crawford, who is the Director of the Alumni Department, said, "I am particularly proud of this year's turnout. This is the most student interest we have ever had in helping us and volunteering."

Due to the commitment and pride of the Alumni for Barry University, the goal of $100,000 not only was reached, but was surpassed by nearly $10,000. The donors were allowed to choose to have their donations benefit the scholarship fund, the building fund, or the unrestricted fund (which leaves that option to the University's discretion). The majority of the donors gave the money to the unrestricted fund, which covers basically everything.

Barry, a non-profit university, depends on the annual Phonothon and other fund raising events to meet the needs of the budget. Without the annual Phonothon the school would have to consider raising tuition in order to survive.

Mrs. Crawford said, "I consider this year's Phonothon a success, simply because of the involvement from the community here at Barry and from the community of Miami Shores, which is our backbone. This is more than I could have dreamed of."

Barry Hosts Leaders Foreman Theatre Goes Belly-Up

On Saturday, September 22, Barry University held a Leadership Day, sponsored by Campus Ministry, for students from several different colleges who were interested in learning how they could develop into community leaders.

The theme of the event was "If you can't walk on water, what can you do? We believe you can do plenty." A total of forty students from Barry, The University of Miami, Florida International University, St. Thomas University, and Broward Community College gathered to discover together their individual gifts and talents, and to discuss how to use them for the betterment of their community.

The day focused on Christian service, as open discussions addressed the increasing role of the laity in the church. Julie B. Mickler, one of the four campus ministers at Barry said, "Lay leadership in the church should not be limited to the traditional Lector or Eucharistic Minister roles, but rather, a holistic spirituality includes service such as tutoring, visiting orphanages, and feeding the homeless as well as worship and prayer."

The day began at 10:00 A.M. with refreshments and informal sharing. After the opening prayer, Fr. Dennis Rausch from Florida International University spoke on the topic of exploring one's gifts and building the self-esteem and the confidence necessary to use such qualities in our parishes and local communities. Students shared their individual ideas and feelings in small and large group settings. Sr. Mary Therese, another campus minister at Barry, said "We all need to pool our gifts and talents. We are all called to minister."

Later in the day, four separate workshops were offered on the topics of relationships, communication skills, student led worship and prayer, and today's leadership in the Church.

The afternoon came to a close at 4:00 P.M. with some time for quiet, personal reflection, and a prayer of commitment.

Theater-going Barry students will miss the professional plays put on by the Ruth Foreman Theatre Company this year. The company canceled its last show, I'm Not Rappaport, last year, and will not have any more this year.

The Ruth Foreman Theatre Company made Barry University its home from July 1989 until its closing in April 1990. The company had to shut its doors due to bankruptcy.

The Ruth Foreman Theatre had a "working relationship" with Barry University, according to Pat Minnaugh, chairperson of the fine arts department. The company rented out the theatre facilities at Barry, and used them to stage their productions. In return, Barry received discounts on tickets for both students and faculty, the company provided internships for students who were studying theatre, and part of the profits from each play went to the fine arts department for scholarships and renovations to the existing facilities.

During the months that the company resided at Barry University, it put on six plays. Scheduled performances last year included The 1940s Radio Hour, Broadway Bound, Child's Play, Milk and Honey, and I'm Not Rappaport. The company adjusted their schedule in order to avoid interfering with Barry theatre department productions, such as Twelve Angry Men, last spring's Pelican Theatre performance.

In the summer of 1990, renovations were made to the Shepard and Ruth K. Broad Center for the Performing Arts, and the Pelican Theatre was built. Some new classrooms and faculty offices were built as well. Ironically, these renovations were made to accommodate both the theatre department and the Ruth Foreman Theatre Company.

The Ruth Foreman Theatre is no longer in existence, but the Barry University theatre department will continue to produce plays. Two plays have been produced thus far this year, Orphans and Seven Keys to Baldpate.

Barry Library Receives Knight Grant

Barry University has received a $250,000 award from the Knight Foundation in order to extend the Monsignor William Barry Memorial Library's electronic services.

The grant, which the university must match, will be used to obtain new computer terminals and an electronic link-up service allowing students and faculty alike to retrieve library information on a twenty-four hour basis.

"This will be very useful for our campus," said Hugh Ripley, University Librarian, and Dean.

The $500,000 project, estimated to be completed by the spring of 1993, consists of installing 20 terminals in the library building and another 20 to 30 in dormitory lounges, faculty offices, and other common areas of the campus.

The terminals will be linked to the libraries of nine different institutions, and to public libraries in the area. Barry's outreach campuses in Indiantown, Fort Myers, and Homestead will also be connected to the system. "This will give us access to 21,000 periodicals and over 9 million items," said Ripley.

Although the library already has access to this material through its membership in the South Eastern Florida Library Information Network, the new project will help users to locate the information easier and faster.

The project is expected to begin by January, 1991. Not all elements of the project have been formulated. "We have interviewed three companies that provide the service needed here; however, the decision of which to hire has not been made at this time," said Ripley.

Barry University's grant proposal, submitted along with 24 others from various competing colleges and universities, was revised and recommended to the members of the foundation by their selection committee. "The members felt that it was a strong proposal," said the vice president and secretary of the Knight Foundation, Jim Spaniolo.

"We decided to award Barry because we thought that this grant would strengthen the institution and that it would provide services to its community," said Spaniolo.

"The fact that the library is the biggest building on campus and that [the library's] budget has been increased by 20% annually impresses these various foundations," said Ripley. "They see our commitment to the library. They see that it [the library] grows."

The Knight Foundation, the philanthropic division of Knight-Ridder Inc., gives grants primarily to educational institutions in the cities where Knight-Ridder newspapers operate.

Students Cautioned About Eating Disorders

The week of October 21-25 was "Eating Disorders Awareness Week" at Barry. A lecture was held at Thompson Hall that pointed out the potential seriousness of eating disorders to all students. This is an alarming issue, and anyone who sees himself or herself reflected in the descriptions of these disorders given below should seek help immediately.

Eating disorders affect people around the world, especially young women. The most common eating disorders are anorexia and bulimia. Many people are currently trying to find effective measures to treat people with these eating disorders.

Anorexia causes the individual to continuously feel fat, even when he or she is thin and (in fact) losing weight. The individual with this eating disorder practically starves in a desperate attempt to lose weight and become "slim."

Bulimia, or binge-purging, causes a person to starve for long periods of time and then overeat. After bingeing the person induces vomiting. A bulimic person, after the long starvation periods, will eat almost anything and will then either induce vomiting, or take an excessive amount of a laxative to undo the binge. A bulimic person, like an anorexic person, constantly feels fat.

There are many causes of eating disorders. Most causes, however, share the property of an individual's low self-esteem. The person perceives himself or herself as fat and forces excessive weight loss. Curiously, persons with these eating disorders often were not fat to begin with.

While the two previous disorders consist of a dangerous and extreme attempt at weight loss, another eating disorder exists at the opposite end of the scale—obesity. An obese person has no control over his or her food intake. Stress usually accentuates the condition, causing some people to overeat.

The common thread of low self-esteem is also present here. People who are overweight (and have been bothered by it all their lives), sometimes give-up trying to lose weight. These people continue eating abnormal amounts of food until they can no longer control how much they eat.

Eating disorders are problems that do not often surface. Like alcoholics, persons with these conditions are often reluctant to admit that they have a problem. If you suspect that a friend has a condition similar to one of those mentioned above, be a friend and talk to, encourage, and support him or her. This simple action could be the first step on the road to recovery.

Barry to Entomb Time Capsule

As the year of its 50th anniversary draws to a close, Barry University is preparing for its journey into the next century by entombing a time capsule on the university campus.

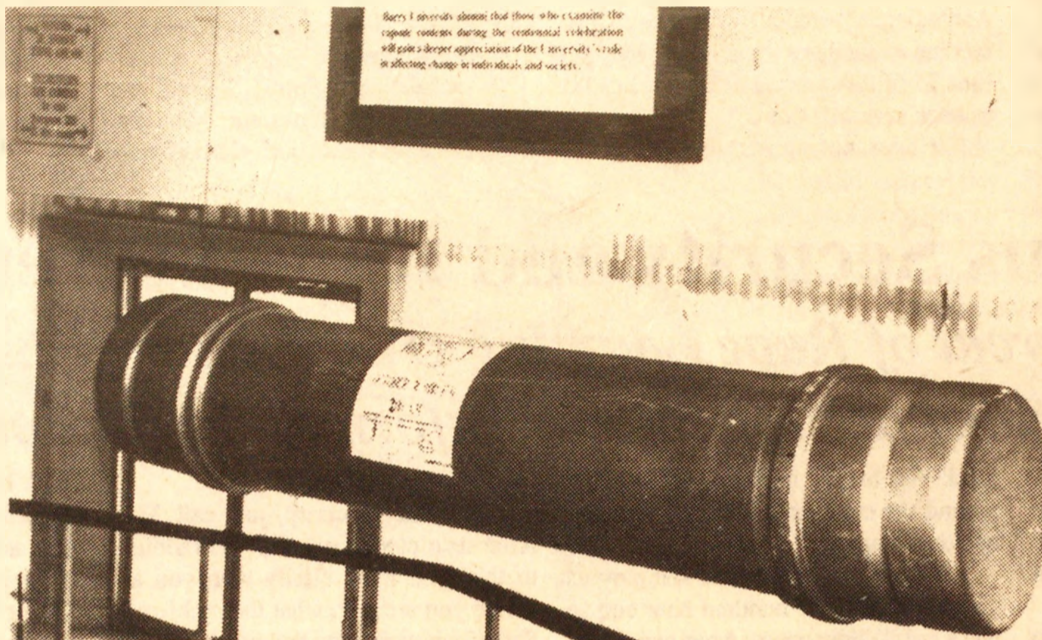

The entombment will take place during Founder's Week, on the afternoon of November 14 in the university's new Health & Sports Complex located west of North Miami Avenue.

The time capsule's purpose is to preserve articles that represent accomplishments of Barry's over its first 50 years. Included are memorabilia that document Barry's growth from a student population of 40, in 1940-41, to its present population of over 6,000.

In addition to telling the story of Barry's growth, the items being placed in the capsule portray the university's involvement in community development and its commitment to serving the needs of the underprivileged. For instance, Chris Evert donated a pair of shoes to Barry's "Shoes for the Homeless" project several years ago, which will be included in the capsule. According to Donna Crawford, coordinator of the Time Capsule project, "Barry was very successful in its efforts to collect shoes for the homeless, and the shoes of the famous tennis player will be included as a symbol of our achievements."

The time capsule is scheduled to be opened during Founders' Week in the year 2040. A letter enclosed in the capsule addresses the future Barry population, asking the important question, "where are your homeless now?" We can only hope that the answer will reflect the

Time Capsule Unearthed

Today, 14 November 2040, a time capsule buried fifty years ago at Barry was opened and its contents removed by Geraldo Rivera III as 35,000 students watched by televue. The exact contents of the capsule were previously unknown due to the destruction of records by a computer virus that struck before vaccines were developed.

broadcasting came forth with a device which he referred to as a "vieseear." Although the image produced was of poor quality, most viewers could make out a woman, identified as Sr. Jeanne O'Laughlin (the Barry president credited with encouraging campus expansion) with a gilded shovel dedicating the site of a future building, located where Barry's west gym now sits. Remarkably, she was shoveling the dirt herself instead of allowing a robot to do the work.

Among the items found was an unusual set of footwear, known in those days as "sneakers." Written on these peculiar shoes were two words which turned out to be the name of a famous tennis player of that time period: Chris Evert. She donated these shoes to publicize the plight of the homeless.

Barry was involved in activities to help the homeless during that era, as evidenced by a letter enclosed in the capsule asking, "Where are your homeless now?"

Anti-Drug Rally Kicks Off Red Ribbon Week

Parents, students, faculty and community members participated in the second annual "Take Back Our Streets" Anti-Drug Rally on October 21 at the Barry University Auditorium. The event was sponsored by The Miami Coalition for a Drug Free Community, the Religious Task Force and about 15 churches within the North Dade area.

Sr. Marie Carol Hurley, event coordinator, expressed: "We are very excited about the way Red Ribbon Week was started on our campus. It shows that the community still cares deeply about having a drug-free society and about re-establishing positive values."

The rally kicked off at 2:00 p.m. with more than 1,000 people present to join the celebration. Entertainment included guest speakers, music and songs by different Christian choirs, in addition to the expected welcome address by Sr. Jeanne O'Laughlin, president of Barry University.

The challenge, as expressed by the fliers that advertised the rally, was to "engage each citizen, school, church, and synagogue...to solve problems in their own backyard."

Opening Date for Gym Remains in Question

An official day for the ceremonial opening of Barry's new health and sports center has not been determined as of yet. According to the superintendent of the project, Bruce Randell, "It should be ready around the first week of November, if everything goes according to plan." That would be good news for the women's basketball team's home opener against Flagler College.

The construction of the new 60,000 square foot complex has been a fast process, but with late additions (primarily consisting of outdoor facilities), it has seemed like an eternity for some university students. "This is my junior year, and all I ever heard each year was how we were getting a gym," said Ann Martin, who is pursuing a degree in broadcast communications at Barry.

The actual construction of the building has not taken that long, however. According to Randell, "The permit for the outdoor facilities wasn't approved until June 25 of this year, and that has pushed us back several months."

It does not appear that anyone is complaining, however, after viewing the results. According to Barry's new Sports Information Director, Mike Bunting, "It's a major step-up in class, and it's going to help the image of Barry University. The university has grown so much under Sister Jeanne's leadership, and this is just another example of that growth." Bunting went on to say, "It's going to up-grade all of our athletic programs—even the teams that don't play indoors."

The Health and Sports Center's main attraction is its gymnasium. The first thing that draws attention is its hardwood floor. The National Basketball Association (N. B. A.)-approved Robins floor system is described by Randell as "The Cadillac" of basketball courts. Next are the N.B.A.-style basketball hoops that are unique in university gymnasiums. Normally, universities have ceiling mounted hoops.

Other indoor facilities include a 2500 square foot weight room, an 1800 square foot physical therapy room, 16 offices, 8 locker rooms, and numerous other utility rooms and classrooms.

Campus Security and Rape Prevention

With the Threat of Rape Looming Over College Students, the Buccaneer Decided to Share Some Information for Your Protection

At Barry University, as at any American college campus, there exists the possibility of rape. There are many things that students should know about protecting themselves from rape.

The Barry campus is fortunate to have one of the best security systems around. The widely used corporation known as Wackenhut secures the campus twenty four hours a day, seven days a week. There are four guards working around the clock to protect the students and the campus.

Every one of Wackenhut's employees goes through a one hundred hour course and a twenty hour course when arriving at Barry. These two courses must be taken in order to become a security guard. Along with the two courses, Wackenhut does an extensive background check on the individual applicants.

To notify security, just call 3333. After six o'clock p.m., dial *3. In addition to this, you must clarify who you are, where you are, and what the problem is. Security is more than happy to work with the students at any time, for any reason.

Despite Barry's security force, one should not take unnecessary risks. Every human being is a potential victim of rape.

It is believed that the most vulnerable target of rape is a woman. However, rape can, and does, occur to men and children as well. According to the State Attorney General's Office, "Studies do not indicate any age preference by rapist's, nor do they support the myth that sexual assault is provoked by either a woman's mode of dress or her mannerisms."

Law Fraternity Gets Off the Ground

The Barry University Pre-law chapter of Phi Alpha Delta was officially installed yesterday, 1 November 1990. It was held at the federal courthouse downtown, and will be attended by our founding members, new members, local area federal judges, faculty and administration, and other PAD members in South Florida.

PAD plans to be involved in as many social and community service oriented projects as possible. Fundraisers are being planned that promise to be fun and beneficial to all. Events include preparing for the installation ceremony and assisting the Resident Hall Association by escorting trick-or-treaters around campus Halloween night.

PAD is an organization which gives members a better understanding of legal careers. It is the largest international legal organization, second only to the American Bar Association nationally. Having a PAD chapter at Barry gives exposure to the university itself, and to any other organizations associated with it.

From the Editor...

As the new editor of The Barry Buccaneer, it is my privilege to present you with another year of your student newspaper.

I call it your newspaper because that is precisely what it is. This year, the Buccaneer will strive to increase student participation through articles that will (hopefully) inform and entertain. Our goal will be to provide information that is timely and relevant, while giving members of our community the opportunity to express themselves in a public forum.

To accomplish this, we need your support. A campus newspaper cannot be considered a vehicle for student expression if the students do not express anything. Get involved: if you have something important to say, say it where everyone can hear you...the community newspaper!

One method for you to voice your ideas is through letters to the editor. Always feel free to write a response to an article or letter, bring an important issue to light, or comment on the content of the newspaper. Simply type-up your letter, sign it, place it in an envelope addressed to "The Barry Buccaneer," and drop it in the campus mail room.

On a different note, I would like to acquaint you with some of the articles and columns in this issue. One addition to the Buccaneer this year is the presence of regular columns reviewing everything from movies to restaurants. One column, which appears on this page, is The Report Card, by Mark Carlson, a review of campus services based on a 4.0 scale. In the entertainment section we have reviews of restaurants, movies, and plays. The sports section has also been enlarged to cover the flourishing athletic program at Barry. It includes box scores and summaries of each team's season to date. Finally, a new feature that I would like to point out is the personal advertising section. The aim of this section is to allow Barry students looking for friendship (or even romance) to meet one other and exchange messages.

An Open Letter to the Student Body

Dear Students,

Quit your complaining! All I ever hear from you is "There's never anything to do around here!" That's utter nonsense! It seems to me you would rather spend your time thinking about what you're not doing instead of what you could be doing.

Try this, instead of filling your brains with idle thought, or engaging in mindless chatter, why not entertain loftier modes of expression. For example, participate in the many jocular social events planned, and produced, by our very own student activities department. They work hard for us, and they always give a superior show—that is, if you show. In fact, student activities actually listens to and encourages any good ideas, providing you with another great college experience. So, get off your butt and, forgive the platitude, "make it happen." Remember: apathy deserves no sympathy.

The Report Card

In this column, I voice my cynical opinion about different departments, events, and every day happenings around campus. I give them a grade ranging from A to F, and then state the reasons why they received that grade. Agree or disagree with me as you choose, your response is welcome.

|-------------------------------------|---|
| The Student Government Association: | D |
| The Learning Center                 | A |
| The Computer Lab                    | F |
| The New Gym                         | B |
| The Cafeteria                       | C |
| Channel 40                          | B |

The grade of A is excellent, with no room for improvement.

The grade of B indicates that something is good, but could use improvement.

The grade of C is too mediocre. More effort is needed.

The grade of D is poor. Something needs to change.

The grade of F indicates failure. It shows little effort, and improvement is mandatory.

The Student Government Association receives the grade of D because of the mistake-ridden handout that was recently posted around campus. What caught my eye was, "You gotta to have at least a 2.0 G.P.A. in order to be a member." "Gotta to?" Does the person responsible for the handout have a 2.0? Whatever the case may be, I think a visit to the English skills clinic is in order. I might also suggest that the author make a phone call (for help) to his or her tenth-grade English teacher.

Also, isn't it funny that only 21 of the 27 members of S.G.A. submitted their biographies to this issue of the Buc? I thought S.G.A. was supposed to fight apathy among students, promote interest in student functions, and get things accomplished here on campus; it looks more like they're promoting apathy.

The learning center receives an A. Anyone who needs help in math or English can find it here. If the Learning Center is getting me through math, they can help anyone! The Learning Center is located on the first floor of the Garner building. It is one of the better academic services on this campus, yet few people use it. What are people waiting for?

The reasons the Computer Center got an F are numerous. Due to space I can only list a few. First, I think it's ridiculous to charge forty dollars for the use of the computer lab. The lab should be available to every student who pays the student activity fee. Second, students who take two or three computer classes have to pay the forty dollar fee two or three times! They sure don't get two or three times the service. And third, the service in the lab is substandard. They seem to be more interested in checking the validity of your ID than helping you with the computers. Something has to change. The only saving grace of the computer center is the equipment. The technology is up to date and the computers are in good working order.

The new gym gets a B because the gym itself seems new, but it is an old idea. I would give it an A, but due to tardiness it gets knocked down a grade. The athletes now have the complex they have been waiting for, but what took it so long?

The cafeteria gets the grade of C for the average quality of food they have been serving. I can't count how many times I have sighed, "Hot dogs again?" upon reading the menu. And why does the cafeteria use fancy names to describe bland foods? Camouflage? I am sorry, but the name "International Hot Dog Bar-trendsetter" doesn't make the hot dogs taste any better. On the positive side, I find that the service partly redeems the boring selection of foods. The staff up there are busy people, and they deserve a hand for their service. They are all friendly, hard working, and dependable. Besides, it must be hard to serve that food with a straight face.

Channel 40 deserves a C, but I gave it the grade of B for BORING. There is nothing I would rather be doing than watching channel 40 (Except watching the weather channel to find out the latest weather in Southeast Asia). Will the television studio be producing shows to put on Channel 40? I need more stimuli.

Why We Should Fear Saddam Hussein

It was a strange request for Ahmad to make, but I thought little of it at

As we walked around some of the back streets of Dammam, I had the impression that something was about to happen. The day was typical for the time of year in the eastern province of Saudi Arabia: the sun was bright and the air was hot and dry. The streets were a mix of the modern and the ancient. Pavement and automobiles of today mixed with the dust and smells of the centuries to create a labyrinth that quickly destroyed my sense of direction. I had to trust in my guide completely, as I was lost both geographically and culturally.

We came upon the town square rather suddenly, and I was shocked to find a huge, noisy crowd gathered there. Several thousand men were crowded together there, throbbing with expectation of something I could not have imagined in my wildest dreams. A slightly elevated platform rose near the center of the crowd and was the focus of the masses. I asked my guide what was going on, only to have him answer, "You will see."

A door opened at the end of the square and a man in chains emerged with a fierce-looking police escort. All eyes focused on him as the crowd was still. Silence. Then I noticed that the platform held a large block of wood, and that a man, dressed in the black robes of an executioner, was approaching it with a large, curved sword in hand.

When the officers and the prisoner reached the platform, an officer read aloud from a book; evidently he was reading the charges. According to Ahmad's translation, the prisoner was a Filipino who had entered a house, raped a man's wife, and later killed the husband. For these crimes, sharia (Muslim) law prescribes death by mutilation (otherwise known as a beheading). Based on the crowd's reaction to the charges and the punishment, they were clearly in support of the law.

After what seemed like an eternity of ceremony, they tied the prisoner down with his neck exposed and fixed on the wooden block. The noise level of the crowd began to swell, but the prisoner was surprisingly quiet. He seemed to have resigned himself to his fate and to be prepared for his punishment. I watched the scene with a strange mix of fascination and terror. This was the twentieth century! Did they really still do this? It could not have been real, but there it was, a man being prepared for a public execution!

As the executioner approached, the crowd went silent again with a quiet that seemed to pulsate with anger and fear. The executioner raised his weapon. As every eye in the square followed its path, he let it fall. Three blows of the sword were used to punish the murderer. Three blows were used to take a man's life.

I never forgot the words I heard Ahmad say as I watched the scene with unbelieving eyes: "It is the will of Allah, and as it should be."

When informally polling Barry students on the role that America has been playing in the middle east over the past two months, I found that a disturbing majority of the students want the American forces to engage Saddam Hussein's troops and "get it over with." Americans have re-developed a sense of confidence in our military superiority, thought to have been lost after the Vietnam conflict, and this fuels the fire of popular opinion. This is a frightening proposition. But as the situation wears on, and American troops sweat it out in the desert of Saudi Arabia, the site of the holiest shrines of the Moslem religion, it is becoming a popular point of view.

What these true believers do not realize, however, is the very real threat that the 'middle-eastern madman' poses to our troops, and that our enemy is not merely the Iraqi footsoldier, but the ideology that drives him to battle.

Iraqi ideology is based on traditional desert values that are rooted in violence. Sharia law is merely an example of the violent potential of the Arab people. In this legal system, the punishment usually fits the crime, and it is not unusual to find public floggings, stonings and mutilations (removal of the hands, feet, or head). Based on the Koran—the will of Allah—the laws have been a part of the basis of Arab society and have been enforced for centuries. However, the violence of the Arabs is not limited to capital punishment, as can be seen in their approach to war.

In the centuries immediately following Mohammed, the Arabs created an empire that stretched from Spain to the middle east. This empire was created by a series of holy wars, or *jihad*s, that gave the conquered people a simple choice: convert to Mohammedism, or die. For the Mohammedan soldier, a jihad was an opportunity to go directly to the paradise promised in the Koran; for any man killed while fighting for God's will would be granted entrance into the kingdom of heaven.

The 1980s have given us several examples of the modern jihad. In Afghanistan, a rag-tag group of rebels drove the giant Soviet machine back to Moscow. During the Iran-Iraq war, millions were sacrificed on the battlefield for no significant gain of any kind. The leaders of both sides of this conflict, Saddam Hussein and Ayatollah Khomeini, declared the war a jihad and inspired the masses to make the ultimate sacrifice—that of their lives. Stories of atrocities came back to the west of the use of chemical weapons and of children marched into minefields to clear the path for the troops that would follow.

Saddam Hussein has already called the potential war with the United States a holy war—calling on his people to defend the most venerated shrine of their religion, Mecca. For the Arabs, there could be no greater call to battle than to defend their faith. Couple this with the riches of the oil fields of the eastern province of Saudi Arabia and those already taken from Kuwait. They clearly give the war a practical purpose: Iraq's oil wealth would soar with the control of these territories.

Militarily speaking, it is true that we have a strong technological advantage over the Iraqi army. But in the desert, where the battles would be won or lost, our soldiers will have to face a horde of people who have but one thing on their minds: jihad. This is a land where one man's interpretation of the "will of God" rules, and where violence can be the basis for spiritual salvation. Are we prepared to fight an enemy who has nothing to lose in battle and everything to gain in death? In Vietnam, our soldiers had to face an enemy who used children and babies as weapons, and we are, in many ways, still recovering from the shock of that experience. Are we prepared to create and witness the slaughter of millions of men, women, and children? As we have seen in the past decade, this is not an unreasonable scenario to expect. A war with Iraq would be potentially devastating not only to the American soldier—who would have to face an enemy who knows no fear—but to the American psyche as well.

But what can we do? Is there a way out of the stalemate? Perhaps the Chinese can give us an answer. Sun Tzu, the first known military philosopher, said: "When an enemy is surrounded, leave him an escape route. If surrounded, he will fight like a captured tiger. If there is an escape route, he will quietly withdraw to live another day."

My suggestion to the aggressive majority is that we have patience, and allow for Saddam Hussein to quietly withdraw. After the embargo has taken its full effect on the economy of Iraq, he will be forced to withdraw as he will not have the funding for a war. We need to exercise patience in the coming months as we try to persuade Saddam Hussein, and the population of Iraq, that withdrawal from Kuwait would be "the will of Allah, and as it should be."

We are now in the silence that precedes the falling sword. Both Iraq and the United States would like for the world to believe that they are the executioner, the minister of world justice. Let us act with prudence, and avoid the falling of the sword. Allow for our enemy to live again. Three blows of the sword were used to take the life of one man. If we are the executioner, how many blows will we have to strike in order to administer justice, and are we prepared to try?

Impure Thoughts

Every once in a while I wonder about the strangest things—sort of like Arsenio Hall when he says "hmmm..." The problem is that once I start thinking about something I just can't get it out of my head.

For instance, the other night I was unwrapping a new bar of soap, and I began wondering what is in the .56% of Ivory that is not pure? I mean, if it's 99.44% pure, what's in the rest of it? If I get really imaginative I can envision a tiny .56% sphere of impure "something" in the center of each bar.

But that's ridiculous. If one really thinks about it, what do they mean by pure, anyway? It sure looks like 100% pure soap to me. And the towel I dry myself with after washing with 100% pure soap is definitely 100% pure towel. Furthermore, not all pure things are necessarily good. As I see it, a 100% pure cockroach is still disgusting.

And speaking of cockroaches, why is it that 99.44% of all dead cockroaches are found lying on their backs? I don't know about other people, but almost every time I see a cockroach carcass (and, living in Kelley Hall, I am often pleasantly surprised by this sight), it is on its back. Is there some sort of cockroach code that demands the (soon to be) lifeless creatures to "assume the position" of eternal slumber? Do they throw themselves on their backs as a warning, a black flag of sorts (pardon the pun), to their loved ones that there is poison around?

To put my mind at rest, I asked an insect expert (my friendly neighborhood pest control professional). He wasn't sure, and, for that matter, had never noticed the phenomenon! With a wave of his hand and a suspicious slip of his noxious bottle of chemicals in my direction (he was used to dealing with organisms like me), he said, "probably instinct."

Now, I find "instinct" to be a curious word. Sometimes it's used to explain things that no one really understands. For example, is it instinct that leads 99.44% of all human beings to throw out the last .56% bit of soap in order to open a new bar? I've thought of writing the company and asking, but then, I'm afraid that if I did, I'd lather not.

Meet Student Government Association

Meet the Prez

Do you know who the new president of student government is? This year, S.G.A.'s president is Alex Franco, and I would like to help you get to know her. Alex is a Junior with a marketing, economics, and finance major. She is also involved in the American Marketing Association for which she is vice-president, and the economics club, for which she is co-secretary. She is also looking forward to working for the Hunger Clean-up in April.

Alex has determined a set of goals for the Student Government Association this year. She wants to earn the students' respect for her position and for the association. She feels this can be achieved by completing projects of student interest. In order to succeed, S.G.A. needs student input. According to Alex, "We need to show students that we work for them. S.G.A. can get things done. Take advantage of this! Tell us what you would like to see S.G.A. do for the school. S.G.A. can't help it if students do not contribute their opinions."

Alex is looking forward to working with the students this year. She would like for them to know that she is willing and available to listen to what they have to say. Most afternoons Alex can be found in S.G.A.'s office (Thompson 206).

Focus On: The House

House

The house is the group that represents the students in the Student Government Association according to year (that is, freshman, sophomore, junior, or senior). There are four representatives for each class: president, vice-president, treasurer, and secretary. This means that there is a total of sixteen positions in the house each year. The speaker of the house is elected by the members of the house at the first congress meeting. The speaker is responsible for running house meetings and reporting back to congress on house activities.

The house also coordinates the spring formal each year, in close cooperation with the senior class.

This semester the house plans on accomplishing many things. First is the Halloween dance on October 26. After this event, the house turns its main attention to fundraising. On the ninth of November, there will be a fall party for the students. We are also planning a pep rally for the basketball team. In December, the Christmas dance will take place and this should be a very exciting event.

Other activities that we are currently working on include the organization of a book swap, and we are currently trying to get our teacher evaluations made public. The house will also take an active role in the organizing of the Student Leadership Conference which will take place in November.

Hopefully, with the help and support of the student body, we can have a very successful semester and year.

We have the following positions available: freshman secretary, sophomore vice-president, senior vice-president, and senior treasurer. If you are interested, please come to the next congress meeting for more information.

by John Ducey

Name: Victor "Gus" Chesna
Year: Junior
Position: Junior Class Vice President
Vic runs for the Barry Cross Country team. He says, "I am looking forward to working with the student body this year to get some creative involvement from its members."

Name: Michael Jason Dawson
Year: Freshman
Position: Freshman Class Treasurer
Mike has set a $5,000 goal for his class this year. He says, "I realize that this is an ambitious figure, but I know that with the Lord's blessing and the support of my class, nothing—and I mean nothing—is impossible!"

The Executive Branch

The cabinet is the executive branch of the Student Government Association. The duties of the cabinet are to monitor S.G.A. activities, approve emergency funds, act as advisor to S.G.A., and perform as a problem-solving unit.

Members of the cabinet receive salaries for their work. The president earns $400.00 per semester, and the secretary makes $300.00 each semester, while the speakers of the House and the Senate, as well as the Treasurer, each receive $250.00 per semester.

The cabinet meets each Wednesday at noon. If a student or organization wants to address the cabinet with some concern or order of business, they must contact a member of S.G.A. and schedule an appointment.

Cabinet members agree that one of the biggest challenges facing S.G.A. is to get students more involved—not only at Barry, but in our local and world communities. A shared goal of cabinet members is to motivate the student body here at Barry to take a more active role in shaping their college experience.

Currently, S.G.A. has embarked upon an advertising campaign to spread the word about the organization's purpose, its goals, and its mission. Included in this are the S.G.A. ad that appears on Channel 40 and the many display cases and bulletin boards around campus that contain detailed information about S.G.A. I am convinced that S.G.A. will obtain the reputation that its members so earnestly strive for.

Barry's Theatre Department Puts On a Stellar Show

Theatre Review

A tradition for good theatrical productions continues to develop for the Barry University Theatre Department. In keeping with this fine tradition, the mysterious melodramatic farce, Seven Keys to Baldpate, will be presented November 1-10.

The original production, based on George M. Cohan's adaptation of the Earl Derr Biggers novel, enjoyed 838 performances on Broadway.

The play revolves around the emotions, happenings, and developments surrounding a $5,000.00 bet between a best-selling author and his good friend, and is set at the Baldpate Inn, located in upstate New York.

The Barry University production stars John Manzelli as best-selling author

William Magee and John F. Williams and Monica Blau as Elijah and Mrs. Quimby, the caretakers of the inn. Dr. Tim Simpson also makes an appearance as Jim Cargan, the corrupt mayor of the nearest town to Baldpate.

Under the expert direction of Stephen S. Neal, the cast is very believable and succeeds in bringing the characters to life. They will keep you on the edge of your seat in suspense, and the outcome will surprise you. Without a doubt, you will leave the theater with the feeling that you were actually a part of the mystery of Seven Keys to Baldpate.

If I were to give this play a letter grade, it would be an A; if the entire theatre season at Barry University is as professionally presented, the Barry community is in for a real treat!

Best-selling author William Magee (John Manzelli), the central character of Seven Keys to Baldpate, shares a moment with Mary Norton (Danielle Suarez)

The price of admission is $4.00 for faculty, staff, and students; $5.00 general admission. Performances will run at 8:15 P.M. on November 1-4 and 8-10, and 2:00 P.M. on November 10 at the Shepard and Ruth K. Broad Center for the Performing Arts. For Reservations, call 899-3425.

Avalon : An Excursion into Nostalgia

Movie Review

Following the successes of Good Morning, Vietnam and Rain Man, director-screenwriter Barry Levinson explores his and other immigrant families' pasts in Avalon. Along with his own memories of his family's past, Levinson interweaves stories of other immigrant families into the film. His parents were on the set during most of the filming and served as experts on the time period concerned. Levinson's father, Irv Levinson, commented that after he saw the 1950s televisions and appliances, he felt like he had gone back in time.

Avalon's story of immigrants settling in Baltimore is shown in a lighthearted manner. The story begins in the present. Sam Krichinsky (played by Armin Mueller-Stahl) gathers his children together and tells them the story of his arrival in Baltimore during the Fourth of July celebrations in 1914 while his wife, Eva Krichinsky (Joan Plowright), disputes certain details of the story. The children sit around the television for hours, drinking soda pop, and watching the unchanging test pattern. Particularly entertaining is Sam and Eva's argument over the weather when they went to pick up his father (who came to join his family in America). Thanksgiving, which serves as a family reunion and feast day, is a holiday that none of the Krichinskys understand, but which nonetheless becomes a tradition for them.

This movie charts the forces that altered the Krichinskys' life from the 1910s into the 1960s. During this fifty-year period, the family changes from a large extended one to several small immediate families.

The Krichinskys were financially successful in America. Sam Krichinsky's son, Jules Kaye (Aidan Quinn), and his nephew, Izzy Kirk (Leo Fuchs), set up a store that sold appliances and televisions. In time, the store became very popular and they, in turn, became rich. An American myth is realized.

Avalon's five decades of history were re-created through the use of old Baltimore, specially constructed sets, extra items such as food and Fourth-of-July lights, and personal treasures that Baltimore's people were willing to lend.

Armin Mueller-Stahl, who plays Sam Krichinsky in Avalon, is himself an immigrant from East Germany. In 1980, he migrated to West Germany because he had signed the Biermann Resolution, a manifesto critical of the East German government. Because of this, he was banned from acting in that country. Since then, he has appeared in the motion pictures Lola, Colonel Redl, Angry Harvest, and the drama Music Box.

Joan Plowright, who plays Sam's wife Eva Krichinsky, is one of Great Britain's foremost actresses. She has appeared on

Other members of the cast include Aidan Quinn as Jules Kaye and Leo Fuchs as Izzy Kirk.

Avalon is a film that shows struggle, hope, and the humor that accompanies them. It portrays immigrants and their families realizing stage, in films, and on television. Plowright was awarded the CBE (Commander of the British Empire) by Queen Elizabeth II for her contribution to the British theater.

their versions of the American Dream. On a 4.0 grading scale, I give Avalon an A.

Restaurant Review

A Lunchtime Alternative

With this issue, The Barry Buccaneer is happy to inaugurate a regular restaurant review column. As the reviewer, I will be writing about several restaurants in the North Miami and Miami Shores area. Most of these will be places for lunch. Several aspects of each restaurant will be discussed and graded based on the Buccaneer's review policy (to the right).

I went to the Gourmet Diner, a small restaurant located on the corner of Biscayne Boulevard and Northeast 139 Avenue. The first thing I noticed was the location. There was nothing notable next to it, and anyone could pass it by without noticing (like I did). It is approximately ten minutes from Barry. Parking is fair at the restaurant. I went at about 1:30 p.m. and it was fairly busy. When I first walked in, it seemed like a quiet place, and one might have thought that it was located somewhere on a dock or a beach, not Biscayne Boulevard. Seating was not a problem and the service was very good.

The menu had a very wide variety of selections. I ordered a very basic lunch: a bacon-cheeseburger, fries, and a Coke. I was amazed by the promptness of the service, for within ten minutes I had received my order.

The food was very good—it definitely beats going to Wendy's. For an extra three dollars, you get seated, get waited on, and eat a much better meal. The one thing I could not believe was the price of a large soda ($1.60). Otherwise, the Gourmet Diner has fair prices.

Overall, the Gourmet Diner is a reasonable place to have lunch. It is near Barry, the service is good, the food is very good, and the price is moderate. I recommend it as a break from the routine of fast food places.

Lady Bucs On Their Way

The Lady Buccaneers are anxiously awaiting a call from the N.C.A.A. that will decide their fate in the Final Four.

Barry University's Women's Soccer team, fresh from their victory over the University of Missouri at Saint Louis, sit on top of the Inter-Collegiate Soccer Athletic Association's (I.S.A.A.) poll this week. They must sit tight until October 29, when the N.C.A.A. Division II Committee extends its invitations.

After extending their winning streak to eight, with a record of twelve wins against only two losses, the Lady Bucs find themselves with their destiny in the hands of the N.C.A.A.'s Tournament Committee.

"I'm pretty confident of our team being selected this year; there are factors involved that I don't have control over, however," said an optimistic, but relaxed Mike Covone. The seventh-year coach added, "We've had a good year. We have played a difficult schedule and won some key games."

The two most important criteria which the N.C.A.A. considers when making its decision are the team record and the schedule's strength. Barry has a slight edge over its competition in each of these categories.

After taking all of these things into consideration, Coach Covone simply stated, "I'm confident. I'm really looking forward to the phone call on Monday."

The Lady Bucs conclude their regular season at home on Tuesday, October 30, against Boca Raton College, at three in the afternoon.

Men's Soccer Ranked Nationally

The men's soccer team at Barry University is off to a great start. Their record as of 22 October was at five wins and three losses, a marked improvement over their record of one win and seven losses at this time last year. They are working their way to recognition, with a ranking within the top five of the Sunshine State Conference, and 15th in the nation.

"What will the outcome of our season be?" queries Hank Werndorf, "I have to admit it would surprise me if we were to win a national championship, although I feel like we are capable of pulling it off. If we can continue to pull together and win our conference matches, we will definitely receive a bid to the N.C.A.A. Tournament."

The team started off the season with a loss to the University of South Florida.

Coach Ian Martin stated that, "The season opener is always tough, especially when it is against a Division I team."

Afterwards, the Bucs came on strong and defeated Rollins College. The next few matches were losses to some of the top teams in the nation, Tampa University and the University of Missouri at Saint Louis. The next four games netted victories over Florida Atlantic University, the College of Boca Raton, Florida Southern University, and Flagler College. Florida Atlantic University and Florida Southern University were key victories because they are in the same conference as the Bucs. The College of Boca Raton is the top-ranked team in the N.A.I.A. The success of the Bucs this season can be attributed to several factors. Chris Folz, the starting goalkeeper says, "The team is much closer now than at the beginning of the season." This is due to the fact that the players know one another better and feel more like a family than ever before.

"There is maturity in this year's team," said Werndorf, referring to the many return players who bring a great deal of experience to the team.

Coach Martin and his assistants are charged with the task of preparing the team for each match. They practice at least four days a week, and their only days off come after each game.

Volleyball Team Picking Up Pace

Lady Bucs volleyball got off to a slow start, but things are looking better.

As of 22 October 1990, the Lady Bucs stood at a record of 7-8 (3-4 in the conference) and the team has shown improvement as the season has progressed. The turning point for the team came after winning two big games against NCAA Division I teams at a tournament held at Rollins College in September. They showed their mettle against these higher-division opponents as they defeated Jacksonville State and a team out of South Carolina.

The Lady Bucs will continue their season through November 18 with a final home match against top-ranked Florida Southern. The game is scheduled for 1:00 P.M., and might even be played in our brand new health and sports center.

This year has been a learning experience for the team. Of the eleven players on the team, there are six freshmen, two sophomores, and three juniors. They also are a part of one of the toughest conferences in Division II athletics, the Sunshine State Conference. Two of the teams they compete against are ranked nationally.

"For a young team to be able to compete with such strong teams and win, I think we did pretty good," says Trellanie Davis, a sophomore player on the team.

With continued improvement, the Lady Bucs are looking to finish the season strong, and will, undoubtedly, be ready for those tough teams next season.

Rugby at Barry?

Yes, that's right, Barry University has a rugby team. Some of you may be wondering "What is rugby?" Rugby was developed in the 1800's by William Ellis, a student in Wales. It derived from soccer and Gaelic football. Rugby is played by two teams of fifteen for two, forty-minute halves. Rugby develops a strong sense of camaraderie. No matter what happens on the field, after the game the two teams celebrate together— sharing techniques and singing traditional songs. Barry's home field is currently at Cagni Park, located at 135th Street and N.E. 8th Avenue, right across from North Miami High School.

The Barry Buccaneers rugby team competes in the Florida Collegiate Division against F.S.U., U of F, U.C.F., F.I.U., F.A.U., and other teams in Florida.

For anyone interested in playing or watching, practice is at the intramural field from 6:00 to 8:00 p.m., Monday and Wednesday evenings, and games are on Saturdays. If you need any more information, check with either Robert Burke or Jim Cook at 758-7774 or 563-8672, respectively. We would appreciate student support in the Buccaneers' quest for a state championship. See you in the rugby pitch!

Golf Team Gets Into the Swing of Things

The Barry University Men's Golf team exhibited fine play in several tournaments this fall. Two sixth-place finishes, one in the NOVA Invitational on 24-25 September, and the other in the Embry Riddle Collegiate Tournament on 13-15 October, highlighted the Buc's success.

"We've never had a winning year, but we're off to a very good start this year," said Tom Abbo, coach of the men's golf team.

Coach Abbo, who is trying to alleviate pressure on the players by making the atmosphere more relaxing this year, remarked, "We're just trying to improve each week." If that holds true, the Buccaneers could enjoy a record-setting season.

Leading the way in scoring honors is Senior Scott Taylor, from Memphis, Tennessee, who has shot rounds of 235 and 239 in the two tournaments. Robert Hall, a junior from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has been consistent also, scoring well with a 236 and a 239. They, along with Ken Owen (244 and 235), and Casey Griffin (241 and 239) finished in the top five for the Bucs in both tournaments.

Coming up: The State Intercollegiate Tournament to be held on the 4-6 November in Tallahassee. On November 18-20, the F.I.U. Fun-in-Sun Tournaments will conclude the fall season.

The men's golf team is looking forward to continued success, and improvement for the rest of the season.

Cross Country Moves Ahead In Conference

Barry University's Men's and Women's Cross Country teams are presently gearing up for the Sunshine State Conference (S.S.C.) Championship on October 27. Both teams have been turning in fine efforts this season.

The men are led by sophomore standout David Schneider, who has finished first for the Buccaneers in every meet to date. Juniors Mark Novak and John Ducey have both turned in fine performances as well, finishing either second or third on the team in all meets. Victor Chesna, Rick Corkum, and Tacius Thelamon round out this year's team.

On the women's side of the ledger, Deana Beran, a sophomore, has placed well for the Lady Bucs this season, finishing first on the team in four out of six meets, including a 15th place finish (out of 32) at the Florida Southern College Invitational. Junior Marty Schafer has finished first among Buccaneer runners in two out of six meets. Colleen Casey, Beth Johnson, and Ann Martinez make up the rest of the team.
